

franken_markdown showcase

A quick tour of what the renderer handles today. The default theme is tuned to look like a high-quality preview: comfortable measure, generous leading, and careful typography.

Inline formatting

You get bold, italic, both, inline code, strikethrough, and links with an autolink fallback like <https://example.com>. Hard breaks work too — this line ends with two spaces.

Lists

- Clean, readable bullets
- With nested-friendly spacing
- And task items:

[x] parse the document

[] shape the glyphs

[] break the lines (Knuth–Plass) Ordered lists too:

1. First

2. Second

3. Third A table Code blocks

```
fn main() { println!("franken_markdown: pure-Rust, dependency-lean."); }
```

 That's the showcase. Run `fmd render examples/showcase.md --out showcase.html`.